I'm going to need to start getting paid for 24-7. I just need some conversation for the shop. I've been operating the shop since January.

And since then, I think I've received a payment of $1,000 twice. So $2,000 since January. Once or twice.

I got to check, but I got to see. I'm there from every day. From 4-11 o'clock.

Most days longer. Until past 6. I handle everything from the shop. Except, well, primarily I'm the secondary contact for the phone calls.

I handle the administration. I handle the walk-in orders, the printing process. And the printing and fulfillment process.

And the overall shop operation. I also oversee the digital team as well too. I've been doing that again for those hours.

And I need to get paid for that. I need to get paid in the form of equity in the company, because the entire infrastructure of the company has been built off my systems, my processes, my thinking, my strategy, my trial and error, my consulting, my mentorship, my adoption, my execution, my implementation. Everything from the structure we're allowed to do the smallest things.

From operate the business to answering the phone calls was built off of my configurations and my input. The business would not be where it's at. It wasn't from unpopular to belief.

You're claiming sales were down, month to month, anything like that. This is a huge fallacy, just like the fallacy with the whole theme transfer thing and all that stuff like that, that was a huge fallacy. I looked at the numbers, and the numbers greatly showed that the business has been increasing in sales for a long time.

And I can upload a document to show the increase in the business. I don't think it's fair to hold the performance of the company. Well, if you hold the performance of the company, it's getting better since I've been there, and you don't have to operate.

So those are two things. Even if I was getting paid less than minimum wage, that we agreed that we're going to hire the front desk row, which is $20 an hour. Even if I was getting paid $10 an hour, which is extremely, extremely below, like, you know, my quality of service, that would equate to more than what I've been sent passively.

And in addition to that, my requirements go beyond just the print shop. So I need an equity deal for the print shop, and I need to get paid for what I've done this year for services as far as operating the print shop. So that needs to be the first thing for us.

The payment that you sent me doesn't even cover the operation of the shop of what I was doing for the print shop, let alone the incremental steps that I've made towards increasing the business, you know, helping with the business efficiency, making sure the business can stand on its own two legs. This doesn't increase the multiple roles that I've been doing as well, too. In addition to other operations, the administrative things I've been doing as well, too.

So I'm not only doing the required roles to make sure the shop goes well, I'm progressively taking actions that multiple positions would take to progress the company forward. So I'm wearing multiple hats and not even getting compensated for the simplest position. So I need to get paid for at least the simplest position, and then I want an equity deal.

I have to get 50-50 on this company. Any time we get profits, that needs to come out. It's not just enough for me to just be seeing, generating the sales, everything like that, and at the end of the month, I'm looking at Uber Eats transfers coming out from your personal expenses from the company account.

That's not fair on my end, so I need 50-50. At the end of every month, when the rent is paid and all the overhead expenses are paid, if we have $100 at the end of the month profited, I need $58 of that $100. Plain and simple.

That needs to be a deal. Secondly, if you want to start saying that the if you want to start saying that the $1,000 that was sent, $2,000 that was sent was to cover the operational fees for me operating the company, anything like that, whatever. First of all, I forgot to mention that you can't tie my performance that I do for you just to the 24-7 branch because I've also been on-call working, and we can just go ahead and say, I've been working as your assistant.

I've been your assistant, you know what I'm saying? But I've been more than an assistant, too, because I've also been the strategist, I've been the consultant, I've been the coach, I've been the implementer, too. You know, I've been the leader of the organization, I've been the free thinker, and so all of this stuff goes into account of me building the businesses, but it doesn't just stop there because it doesn't just stop there because I also have built your other businesses as well, too. In the past two years since I've been working with the tax business, you've grossed more than you've ever done in the 10-plus years you've been doing it.

You know why? Because I also had my hand on putting the money in towards that business, and rightfully so. You started compensating me last year because you saw the increase in sales, but this year is doing even better based off the systems that I built last year because you're actually even using the systems. Last year, you didn't even fully use the systems.

So I need to be rightfully compensated in perpetuity for the tax business because I've set you on a trajectory to do really, really well while I'm doing everything else, you know what I'm saying? So it's not even like I'm just doing that in particular. That alone should deserve a salary every month based off what I've done, based off what you're grossing and everything like that. The business needs to have some kind of a, you know, let's just say you gross $200,000, you know.

I should get at least 10% of that. That's a fair ask, you know. I'm watching you literally pay for other things, mixing expenses, putting stuff here, putting stuff there.

You've accumulated overhead in another business that costs you, what, $4,000 a month. That's not generating anything. It's a losing business.

It's a failing business. I've jumped in to also help that third business as well too. So again, not getting compensated for that as well too.

So when you're sending me this $1,000, what's your expectation is for me to operate, completely 100% operate the 24-7 business and then still be on call to lead the other businesses as well too. You're talking about several jobs, additional jobs that I've been doing. And so the compensation for that is definitely not enough.

It's definitely 100% not enough because I'm wearing not only multiple hats in one business but I'm wearing multiple hats and two of your other businesses as well too. And not to mention last year you threw me on a third in another business that I was supposed to do that for as well too. So it's like, forget the compensation that was owed from last year, just from this year alone.

It needs to be some kind of a huge conversation where I'm getting what I needed from the different things that I've been doing. Again, the tax business, I've been working for you for two years. You've made more money last year than you've ever made ever.

And then this year, you've made more money than in the first few months because it's still going on and you're projected to make more money than you made last year. What that says is, my systems work. My value is there.

I need to be compensated for that. And so when you're doing all these other expenses and you said, you know, it's already March. It's getting towards mid-March.

I need to get compensated. You know, originally I agreed last year that I wanted to do $5,000 a month for me to be working with you. What you ended up doing was paying, negotiating down to $4,000, which I reluctantly agreed, but I didn't.

And you end up paying for the first three, maybe three months you paid. And then after that, it just slowly declined, slowly declined. And then it became a situation where I'm, again, working for free.

I'm operating the shop. I'm doing all this stuff. By the time I had to come manage the new business, I stopped getting paid.

So it was just like, I can't do anything anymore, you know? And so I get it. With the content studio, which is the third business I was referring to, I'm not looking to get immediately compensated for that because that's already a failing business. You've been squandering $4,000 a month for three years on just the rent for that business.

Even though I should get compensated for it, I need to be 50-50 partner on that business as well, too, because this new reinvigoration for the team, completely my idea, completely my systems. The marketing that attracted the talent that we're doing for our productions, completely my idea. It was my idea for you to reach out to Reece, who's been acting as the production manager, who you were reluctant to do that until I kept putting it on you, saying, hey, we need to do that, my idea.

Even the first production we're going to do is my production that we're trying to do. You didn't have any fresh ideas. Again, it was no leadership in this entire situation.

You required me to be the leader, to be the thinker of all this. Because of that, we've now driven suffering. That's further emotions, still a failing business, but has demanded a lot of my time and efforts.

I can't be doing this for free anymore. I need 10% ownership. I need to get, well, you don't have to, maybe not 10% of the optimum tax.

That one is cool, but I need to get paid for the service that I did for that. Just imagine all the days where you call and ask about this fix, because you didn't do your due diligence to check this, and ask about this fix, and ask about this fix, and this is after the work day. You know what I'm saying? Think about these long meetings that you schedule at 7 p.m. on my day at 10.

You know what I'm saying? And I have to be there for all these different meetings and all this stuff like that. Even the adoption. You got an assistant that I gave you that's helping you navigate your workflow to help you with your efficiency.

All that stuff like that is stuff that I put in your business. Your businesses would not be where they're at if it wasn't for me. Well, they're not ideal, but they're greatly improving.

The optimum tax has improved exponentially since I've been there. 24-7 is steadily growing, but the improvements that you're seeing is that the business can now operate semi on its own, or anybody can come in and operate the business, which was never the case when I was there. The Create Content Studio was failing.

Now we're moving towards action, towards actually getting productions coming out of the Create Content Studio as well, too. So it's so many different things that I've done to do this, and the craziest part about it is I've done all of this simultaneously while doing so many different other tasks. And so the unfair part is that when you stop giving the $4,000 last year after just a few months, you try to tie that to saying, hey, my performance is based off what the shop is doing and generating revenue from the shop, even though I was doing way more than just with the shop for the shop.

I was doing stuff for you personally. I was doing stuff for all the other business ventures, but you tied my performance to one business, which is completely unfair. So in addition to being... So I conclude by saying I need to be compensated for the work that I've done, not even looking to get full compensation for the work from last year that I was spending, the accounts payable from last year that I was spending.

This is literally just for... This is literally just trying to get from just this year, you know. You do the math. I'm there.

Monday through Friday, 10 o'clock to 6, 6.30. Okay, so just stop it at 6 o'clock. Act like the extra hours are there. Operating the entire shop.

We're in multiple hats. While still doing administrative stuff. Even if I was getting $10, $15 an hour, you do the math of how much that is.

While I'm doing that, I'm still the troubleshooter for the tax business. I'm still the leader in the content studio business as well too. So it's like so many different things that I have to wear the hats for, in addition to wearing all the hats for the print business.

And I need to get an equity deal on that. I need to get paid for my services. I need to get my services.
